dipped, frozen or on the rocks, Fuzzy's is ready to feed the fright with vampiro-style sauce back at the center of the action and plenty of heat, crunch and after-dark mischief to go around:

- Draco Taco II ($4.69): The legend bares its fangs again, this time with a crispy red shell tucked inside a melted cheese-topped flour tortilla, filled with seasoned ground beef, garlic sauce, spicy vampiro-style sauce, avocado, feta, cilantro and lime.[†]
- Draco'rrito ($10.25): A flour tortilla rolled with a crispy cheese crust and stuffed with cheese, seasoned ground beef, Fuzzy's rice, vampiro-style sauce, sour cream, vampiro queso and crispy red tortilla strips.[†]
- Drac a 'Rita ($9.25): A frozen favorite dressed for the occasion, featuring Fuzzy's house frozen margarita swirled with Bacardi rum and strawberry puree, rimmed with black salt and garnished with a set of vampire teeth.*
- Midnight Matador ($11.69): Casamigos Blanco Tequila, triple sec, margarita mix and blood orange for a citrusy sip made for raising a little havoc.*

Prefer your Halloween plans with fewer fangs? A $5 Modelo draft beer keeps things classic while Draco is in town.*

"Draco has always been about going a little over the top, and we leaned into that even more this year," said Chef Daniel Camp, Director of Culinary for Fuzzy's Taco Shop. "We brought back that heat from the vampiro sauce and layered in plenty of crunch and cheese, then took it one step further with the Draco'rrito, our boldest take on Draco yet."
